

Thomson Reuters hosts journalism training program

Aspiring reporters, recent graduates or business journalists with English proficiency can participate in this training program.

Thomson Reuters offers a nine-month training in New York, London and Asia. The program includes several weeks of intensive classroom training and work on reporting teams with a mentoring support from experienced journalists.

Participants will learn about all aspects of financial reporting, work on fast-paced news stories and enterprise journalism.

Applicants must be able to demonstrate commitment to a career in journalism and a strong interest in issues that affect companies, markets and economies. Experience in data analysis or data-driven journalism and work with multimedia storytelling, as well as fluency in Arabic, Mandarin or Russian language are beneficial.

Apply by Dec. 15.
